

SEPTEMBER 1982

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 6, 1982

THEME MUSIC ...under and fade

AFO: Tens of thousands of union members demonstrated today in Manhattan. This was no strike, no picket line. This was a celebration on this Labor Day 1982, a celebration of the American labor movement. In San Antonio, Texas, the city dedicated a 20-foot statue of Samuel Gompers, the founding father of the modern American labor movement. // In a moment, we will talk about organized labor... its power, its needs, its causes for celebration.

Hi, everybody, this is Al Oickle. I'm with the University News Services at the State University of New York, here at Stony Brook. The name of this program is, "Here at Stony Brook."

Today I'll be talking with two people on the Stony Brook faculty who pay a great deal of attention to labor---not just on Labor Day, but year-round. Later in the program, Sue Risoli will be talking with ~~Terry Netter~~ John P. ... some of about the 50 major programs scheduled in this new academic year at Stony Brook's Fine Arts Center. I hope you'll stay tuned for informative, lively discussion.

THEME UP briefly and fade under

The subject is labor and it seems appropriate to open our discussion with Professor Vera Rony, who is director of the Labor/Management Studies Program, here at Stony Brook. Prof. Rony, why don't we begin at the beginning...the beginning of organized labor.

INTERVIEW: History of labor
Modern changes: international market
"management partnerships"
Labor Studies

10:00

MORE

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 6, 1982 - page 2

AFO: We're going to shift focus slightly now and talk with Professor Bruce Hare of the Department of Sociology, here at Stony Brook. Professor Hare has been in the news the past month as the author of a 50-page report, entitled "The Rites of Passage: A Black Perspective." The report was released by the National Urban League, which commissioned the study, during its annual conference last month. A large part of the report deals with the nation's youth, and with the problems of unemployed youth. // Professor Hare, on this Labor Day 1982, what are your thoughts about the work ethic, and opportunity, and the role of the labor movement?

INTERVIEW: Stratification irony ("permanent underclass")
Plan for coalition: why not labor as a part?

15:00

THEME UP and under...

AFO: We'll return in a moment for Afterword, a segment of our program, "Here at Stony Brook," that will give the two speakers a brief opportunity to respond to what each has said. I want to take a couple minutes now, however, to tell you that this is "Here at Stony Brook," a new program being offered to listeners of WUSB-FM. We will be here every Monday at 6 p.m. for a half-hour. Some of you may recognize me. I'm Al Oickle. ^{During this} Past year, I was the temporary host for "Suny Side Up." That program is heard over WUSB-FM every Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock with Barbara Gore Suter as the moderator. "Here at Stony Brook" will be made ~~of~~ up of several segments each week. We will aim to lead off each Monday with a topical discussion, something as current as today's discussion of labor and economics. ^{And} We will bring you each week a calendar of events at Stony Brook, often including a guest who will be detailing some of the coming activities. We want you to be a part of this weekly program, not only as a listener but as an adviser. What would you like to hear about? You can send suggestions for speakers or subjects by dropping a note to:

MORE

HERE AT STONY Brook - Sept. 6, 1982 - page 3

Here at Stony Brook, WUSB-FM, SUNY at Stony Brook 11794. We also welcome your comments. Prof Jerry Wilford 17:00

THEME up and under

AFO: And now, Afterword. You heard earlier Professor Vera Rony and Professor Bruce Hare discussing the American labor movement and the state of our economy on this Labor Day 1982. Afterword gives them the opportunity for a final word, perhaps responding to what the other said. Professor Hare, you're first.

And, Professor Rony. 21:00

THEME up and under

AFO: As you can imagine, a State University campus with 16,000 students is a very busy place. Stony Brook is no exception. Each week, Here at Stony Brook will provide you with a calendar of events scheduled in the next week or so. Here's Sue Risoli, assistant director of University News Services, here at Stony Brook, with today's report.

J SUE RISOLI interview of John Zofas Terry Netter and Calendar 29:00

THEME up and continue to end (ALWAYS START IT AT 29:00)

AFO: That brings us to the end of our first Here at Stony Brook program. We'll ~~now~~ return on WUSB-FM next Monday at 6 p.m. I hope you'll be there with us.) Until then, this is Al Oickle. So long, everybody.

xxxxx

Our Theme is a ballet for lute performed by Prof Jerry Wilford of The Dept. of Music, West of SB

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 6, 1982

THEME MUSIC ...under and fade

AFO: Tens of thousands of union members demonstrated today in Manhattan. This was no strike, no picket line. This was a celebration on this Labor Day 1982, a celebration of the American labor movement. In San Antonio, Texas, the city dedicated a 20-foot statue of Samuel Gompers, the founding father of the modern American labor movement. In a moment, we will talk about organized labor... its power, its needs, its causes for celebration.

Hi, everybody, this is Al Oickle. I'm with the University News Services at the State University of New York, here at Stony Brook. The name of this program is, "Here at Stony Brook."

Today I'll be talking with two people on the Stony Brook faculty who pay a great deal of attention to labor---not just on Labor Day, but year-round. Later in the program, Sue Risoli will be talking with Terry Netter about the 50 major programs scheduled in this new academic year at Stony Brook's Fine Arts Center. I hope you'll stay tuned for informative, lively discussion.

THEME UP briefly and fade under

The subject is labor and it seems appropriate to open our discussion with Professor Vera Rony, who is director of the Labor/Management Studies Program, here at Stony Brook. Prof. Rony, why don't we begin at the beginning...the beginning of organized labor.

INTERVIEW: History of labor
Modern changes: international market
"management partnerships"
Labor Studies

10:00

MORE

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 6, 1982 - page 2

AFO: We're going to shift focus slightly now and talk with Professor Bruce Hare of the Department of Sociology, here at Stony Brook. Professor Hare has been in the news the past month as the author of a 50-page report, entitled "The Rites of Passage: A Black Perspective." The report was released by the National Urban League, which commissioned the study, during its annual conference last month. A large part of the report deals with the nation's youth, and with the problems of unemployed youth. Professor Hare, on this Labor Day 1982, what are your thoughts about the work ethic, and opportunity, and the role of the labor movement?

INTERVIEW: Stratification irony ("permanent underclass")
Plan for coalition: why not labor as a part?

15:00

THEME UP and under...

AFO: We'll return in a moment for Afterword, a segment of our program, Here at Stony Brook, that will give the two speakers a brief opportunity to respond to what each has said. I want to take a couple minutes now, however, to tell you that this is Here at Stony Brook, a new program being offered to listeners of WUSB-FM. We will be here every Monday at 6 p.m. for a half-hour. Some of you may recognize me. I'm Al Oickle. Last year, I was the temporary host for "Sunny Side Up." That program is heard over WUSB-FM every Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock with Barbara Gore Suter as the moderator. "Here at Stony Brook" will be made up of several segments each week. We will aim to lead off each Monday with a topical discussion, something as current as today's discussion of labor and economics. We will bring you each week a calendar of events at Stony Brook, often including a guest who will be detailing some of the coming activities. We want you to be a part of this weekly program, not only as a listener but as an adviser. What would you like to hear about? You can send suggestions for speakers or subjects by dropping a note to:

HERE AT STONY Brook - Sept. 6, 1982 - page 3

Here at Stony Brook, WUSB-FM, SUNY at Stony Brook 11794. We also welcome your comments.

17:00

THEME up and under

AFO: And now, Afterword. You heard earlier Professor Vera Rony and Professor Bruce Hare discussing the American labor movement and the state of our economy on this Labor Day 1982. Afterword gives them the opportunity for a final word, perhaps responding to what the other said. Professor Hare, you're first.

And, Professor Rony.

21:00

THEME up and under

AFO: As you can imagine, a State University campus with 16,000 students is a very busy place. Stony Brook is no exception. Each week, Here at Stony Brook will provide you with a calendar of events scheduled in the next week or so. Here's Sue Risoli, assistant director of University News Services, here at Stony Brook, with today's report.

SUE RISOLI ^g interview of Terry Netter and Calendar

29:00

THEME up and continue to end (ALWAYS START IT AT 29:00)

AFO: That brings us to the end of our first Here at Stony Brook program. We'll ~~xxx~~ return on WUSB-FM next Monday at 6 p.m. I hope you'll be there with us. Until then, this is Al Oickle. So long, everybody.

xxxxx