Food Co-op Gets Loan To Repair Equipment

By JASON MANNE

The Stony Brook student business corporation, SCOOP, will receive a $5,000 loan to start a cooperative food service in the Stage XII cafeteria next semester.

The loan, granted by the Oberlin College Student Cooperative Association, will be used to clean, repair and install new equipment in the cafeteria. Senior Peter Hickman, a transfer student who founded the Stony Brook cooperative, said that the cafeteria's dining area would have to be closed off from other areas.

Stage XII cafeteria has never been utilized as a food service area. It had been used temporarily as a day care center.

Polity Grants $6200

Polity, the undergraduate student government, has allocated the cooperative $6200 to repay the loan and to be used for other expenses.

The cooperative will be called Harkness East, said Hickman, because the Oberlin food cooperative is called Harkness and because Stony Brook is east of Oberlin. Both the Harkness and Harkness East cooperatives are vegetarian food services. Members will be expected to participate in all aspects of running the food service from cooking to ordering food, said Hickman who added that about 70 people have signed up for the cooperative so far.

Hickman said that he negotiated the interest free loan when he was at Oberlin in April. He said the Oberlin Student Cooperative Association first offered the loan with five percent interest but later decided to give it on an interest free basis.

Hickman said that the loan was needed because the Polity allocation would not be available until September, when Polity's fiscal year begins. He said that it would have been difficult to start the food cooperative without the loan because he could not raise enough money in advance of the opening of the cooperative. Hickman said he expects to start collecting money in the middle of the summer. The cooperative is only open to upperclassmen, said Hickman, because the University does not want it to compete for freshmen with Horn and Hardart. Hickman said that 15 meals per week will cost $12.20 and that 21 meals per week will cost $15.80.

The University Food Committee has approved the cooperative which has received an endorsement by SCOOP. Upon receiving approval from the Faculty Student Association (FSA), the Harkness East Cooperative will become a SCOOP student business. At its last meeting the FSA denied Harkness East Cooperative approval because it had not received notice in writing of University and SCOOP approvals.

Top Financial Officer Quits To Accept Post in Illinois

By DOUG FLEISHER

Vice President for Finance and Management Joseph Diana today received an appointment to a high administrative post at the Urbana-Champaign campus of the University of Illinois. Diana will temporarily be replaced by Assistant Vice President for Finance and Management Carl Hanes while the University conducts an affirmative action search for a permanent replacement.

University of Illinois spokesman Fred Mohn said yesterday that Diana would be appointed to the position of vice chancellor for Administrative Affairs at Urbana-Champaign by the Board of Trustees at its meeting today in Springfield, Illinois. Mohn explained that each of the University's three campuses is headed by a chancellor while the three-campus system is headed by a president. The State University of New York (SUNY) titles its positions in an opposite manner.

Diana, who came to Stony Brook in 1970, was unavailable for comment yesterday but told Statesman on Monday that his resignation was pending approval of his appointment by the Illinois Board of Trustees. His secretary, Assistant to the Vice President for Finance and Management Lois Corwin, said yesterday that Diana was in New York City on personal business.

University spokesman Dave Woods said that University President John Toll praised both Diana and Hanes for the jobs they have been doing in their respective positions. Woods also said that Executive

JOSEPH DIANA

Vice President T.A. Pond will serve as the head of the affirmative action committee which will look for a permanent vice president for Finance and Management, a position which has been renamed vice president for Finance and Business to conform with SUNY Central.

Steady Progress

According to the spokesman from the University of Illinois, Diana was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1950 and taught secondary school in Michigan for two years before joining the University of Michigan staff as an assistant business manager. By 1969, Diana had risen to the position of assistant controller of the University of Michigan.

At Urbana-Champaign, which had an enrollment of 35,000 last fall, Diana will be one of four vice chancellors working under Chancellor J. W. Foltson, the chief campus administrator.

Over 3800 Receive Degrees at Graduation '75

Comprised of 25 separate ceremonies and originating with the Processional in the Union, Stony Brook's 15th annual Commencement Exercises featured more than 3800 undergraduates and graduates receiving degrees, with five seniors awarded special honors. Close to 10,000 guests were in attendance to observe the event.

The seniors granted special honors were the following: Craig Mark Mason, recipient of the Ward Melville Valedictory Award; Jay G. Baris, former Editor-in-Chief of Statesman, was granted the William J. Sullivan Award for service and academic achievement; Elena M. DiLapi received the Distinguished Community Service Award; Cynthia Woolbright Ramert was granted the Elizabeth D. Couey Award for contributions toward the University's extracurricular activities; and Deborah Green, who won the United University Professions Award for "concern for the promotion and protection of human rights and values."

Characterized by numerous outdoor receptions, the 1975 Graduation ceremonies were held from 10 pm to 12 pm and from 3:30 pm to 5pm.

Strike Slowing HSC Construction Predicted to End by Next Week

By DAVE RAZLER

The strike by truck drivers which has slowed construction of the Health Sciences Center (HSC) should be over next week according to a spokesman for Turner Construction Company.

The three-month long strike by Local 282 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters has blocked all deliveries to the HSC construction site since March 20. Work has been continuing at a slowed pace on the project with materials already on hand, said Turner Project Manager Thomas Ilich.

The Teamsters struck after a Teamster foreman who had been on the job for two weeks was laid off. The Union contended that its contract with Turner and several other contractors on the site called for a foreman to be hired for any multi-building job costing more than $40 million.

State University Construction Fund Coordinator for Stony Brook Joseph Curley said, "we weren't about to pay for this man, we feel that they are misinterpreting their agreement," and that the foreman clause applied only to large projects "like Lefrak City." "We can't legally give the contractor $150,000 and say hire the guy" but it is perfectly acceptable for the company to hire a foreman with the money they have already been given, Curley said.

The Teamsters took their claim to a trade board made up of three labor members and three management members of the Building Contractors', Masons' and Builders' Association as specified in their contract. The board found in the the Union's favor, and mandated that Turner "see to the hiring of the foreman," said Ilich. Ilich added that "it has taken between March 20 and May 20 to arrange the hiring."

Although University President John Toll and Curley maintain that construction is proceeding on schedule, Ilich said that there have been many delays, and that construction has only been able to continue with the supplies which have been at the site for three months.

Curley said that when the strike first started, all of the project's workers honored the Teamster pickets. However, after a few days, they went back to work. He accused the union of "featherbedding" and said that the Teamster foreman would do nothing except turn away trucks driven by non-union members. He said that he did not feel that the foreman was necessary and he felt that the union demands that the foreman be supplied with a construction shack and a telephone were even more excessive.

Picketing union members said that they demanded the foreman because he was responsible for the safety of all Teamsters on the job. They said that the foreman did drive in addition to handling matters dealing with the workers' safety.

According to both Curley and Ilich, the next major deliveries scheduled for the site will begin next month when all of the structural steel for Phase II of HSC (the twin tower hospital) will be delivered.

Graduate Nursing

By DOUG FLEISHER

Stony Brook's Health Sciences Center has received approval to start an innovative graduate nursing program, but the program may not start in September.

Associate Professor Leonora McClean, who is also director of graduate nursing programs, said that the two-year program which will lead to a masters degree will begin next semester. "We are admitting students in the fall," she said Monday. McClean added that about 12 students will be admitted.

However, Assistant Vice President for Health Sciences Daniel Fox said that it is not clear when the program will start. "It may be September; it may not be September," he said. The approval of a program is a separate process from the allocation of resources, he added.

McClean has worked for two years developing the program which will specialize in family health care and critical care maintenance. "It's probably one of the first programs in the country to address itself to critical care," according to Health Sciences spokeswoman Toni Bosco. Critical care includes patients who suffer heart attacks, chronic lung disease and automobile accidents.

The new program will be the third graduate nursing program to be offered on Long Island, where programs are presently offered at Adelphi and the New York University extension at Farmingdale.

"We anticipate two faculty, in addition to myself," said McClean. She said that two new people would be hired to fill the positions and also said that applications are still open for students. "We're keeping applications open as long as we can to let people know we are capable of selecting students in the fall," she said.

In explaining why he was unsure whether the program would begin admitting students in the fall, Fox said that "in order to mount a program of this complexity, it is necessary to orchestrate faculties of nursing, faculties of basic health sciences, faculties of medicine, at this University, and of faculties of medicine and nursing at our clinical campuses and other affiliated institutions."

"It is clear that the program will start at some time," said Fox, adding that he would have additional information available later this week.

New Residential Plan Accepted; Polity Expresses Dissatisfaction

By DAVID GILMAN

Despite Polity accusations of the centralization of residential affairs power, Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth has approved a new hierarchy which will "place more broad gauge responsibility into the job of the Quad Manager."

Specifically, the residential employe shuffle now calls for the creation of a Quad Directorship, a post which will be vested with ultimate authority in residential affairs, and the implementation of the following residential employe hierarchy in each quad: Quad Director, Resident's Advisor, Quad Operations Assistant, Graduate Student Program Coordinators and Residential Advisors (RAs).

Change of Plan

At a meeting with Polity officials Monday, Wadsworth altered an original proposal by placing RAs directly beneath college program coordinators. This replaces the former intention of making the RAs directly accountable to the Resident's Advisor. "The plan to have a fulltime Resident's Advisor is no good," said Wadsworth, "but by no means will the concept be abandoned."

ELIZABETH WADSWORTH

Regarding the new residential employe set-up, which will be implemented during the coming academic year, Wadsworth said that "such a plan integrates managerial and college program efforts, and it does it within budget constraints." Furthermore, Wadsworth said that the new plan would enable Housing officials to be more accountable to the needs of residential students, as well as strengthening the Quad staff itself.

Polity Disapproves

Polity Residential Affairs Coordinator Kevin Young believes, however, that the recently proposed plan does not represent an attempt to decentralize quad authority, but concentrates residential power. "Unfortunately, it [the plan] doesn't decentralize power, rather it centralizes it under the Quad Managers and the Housing Office," said Young. "It also gives them more control over more people."

Wadsworth, who denied charges that residential affairs authority would be removed from the respective colleges and placed under the jurisdiction of quad employes, justified the proposed increase of the Quad Manager's powers by saying that "someone has always had the power that the Quad Manager will now have."

The new residential reorganizational plan, according to Wadsworth, has generated student disapproval due to the very terms in which the plan is stated. "One of the problems of this plan is that it is a personnel kind of plan," she said. "It details the relationships between people on the Housing staff, but doesn't show the role of the college legislatures, for example."

Denying any attempt to interfere with what she called "the grassroots power" of the college legislatures, Wadsworth said that students skeptically view the plan because "we [the staff] showed our piece of the action, and not the role of the students." Analogizing this administrative plan to Polity plans, she said that "when Polity delineates their plans, they don't mention the specific Administrative offices which will be affected."

H&H; Let's Roll Up the Welcome Mat

The primary responsibility of a food service on a college campus is to adequately serve the students. And because Horn and Hardart has not fulfilled that task, we believe that the Faculty Student Association (FSA) should not renew its contract for next year.

No matter whose fault it really is—Horn and Hardart or the FSA—the fact is that the campus food service is not doing what it is supposed to do, serve students quality food at reasonable prices.

Prices in the Knosh are similar to off-campus delicatessens. However, unlike outside delicatessens, the Knosh does not have to compete for business. It has a fixed population of at least 5,000 residents and a large number of commuters, faculty and staff to draw from. Many residents who need groceries and foodstuffs that a delicatessen or a supermarket can provide have no way of getting off campus. They are forced to make those purchases at the Knosh where the prices are not competitive.

The Union Cafeteria, Kelly, and H are not performing up to expectations. The same complaints are heard every year by students on the meal plan, and this year is no different. Is it any wonder that freshmen, who are required to pay over $300 a semester for the meal plan, are eagerly trying to sell coupon books, even at a loss?

To insure the campus against another bad food service, a food quality control commission was set up and received one percent of Horn and Hardart's profits. This group, if it deemed the food service satisfactory, would remit this money back to the company as a bonus. Horn and Hardart has not been awarded this money. Instead of increasing its quality of service to compete for the extra profit, Horn and Hardart has compensated by cutting corners and further reducing its quality. Such an attitude towards the students of Stony Brook should not be rewarded by "one more year."

Last October, Statesman documented how Horn and Hardart has not lived up to the pledges made when it received the food contract. In spite of a promise made last spring, there is not going to be a Burger King in the Union Cafeteria.

The University seems not to have made even the most elementary moves to research alternatives to the present food system. We have not seen the commitment necessary from the University, in terms of manpower, to gather data statewide and nationwide so that the University can make an intelligent decision about food service on campus.

When the food contract for next year was first discussed, Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth said that public hearings would be held to solicit student opinions before the FSA made a decision whether to rehire Horn and Hardart.

Now that the spring semester is over, there will obviously be no hearings. Accordingly, we would not be surprised if H&H was given next year's contract. The people making the decision, though, can not be called between 12 and 1 p.m. They all go out to eat.

Walking For Water

To the Editor:

After two years as a resident member of Stony Brook, I have finally realized that the driving force behind this University is not John Toll. I am convinced beyond a shadow of a doubt that the force that drives all students to near insanity is Rod Serling. Who else could have the power to cause a water main break, that in turn would force 5000 students to have to walk to get a drink, walk to take a piss, walk and then have to wait on line to take a shit, and then after all this have the gall to make it rain. There is no question about it, we have crossed over into the Twilight Zone.

Water Worries

To the Editor:

Since we have been 'blessed' with constant water outages, why doesn't the administration issue the students of Stony Brook University canteens? The canteens will have our 'sacred' I.D. numbers engraved on them (14 karat gold, of course), so when a water outage does occur, you simply show your I.D. card and pick up your canteen.

Academic Knockout

To the Editor:

Last night I had a dream. It was sort of inevitable, as I've been watching too much Danny Kaye, lately. But anyway, there I was a ringside, having just seen Ali fight Forman for the umpteenth time. Now we were all keyed up for the big match. All of a sudden I started feeling funny all over, and then the whole crowd was looking right at me. I was surrounded by ropes on all sides, and everyone was calling my name. I didn't know what was going on, only that I was scared out of my Everlast trunks (where did they come from?).

Then this monster of a fellow got into the ring, and a voice out of nowhere boomed out "And in this corner, weighing heavy on your mind, the champion, Fah Kulty." Everyone booed, but I couldn't hear a thing. A bell rang somewhere, and unseen hands pushed me into the ring. I had no time to think. I needed time. The only thing in my mind was to stall. I covered my face with my arms, as I was pushed against the ropes by a powerful D to my midsection. Then he pummeled me with a quick F-C-F combination that dropped me to the floor for the mandatory eight count. He just stood there and taunted me. I got up off my knees and knew that I had to do better.

I don't know how I made it through those first few rounds, but I did. I didn't think that I would go all the way, though. That's when I heard the voice. It was strong and noble, yet kind. "Get thee thy textbooks behind thee," it said, and I listened. I was filled with new strength.

The bell rang once more, and again I faced the giant. He came at me with all he had, but his fists just seemed to glance off me. His blows swiftly became ineffectual. But the preceding rounds were all his. I had to strike back. First a double B combo, and then three A's followed by another B to the breadbasket. The smile left his face. Even if I lose, I thought to myself, at least I'll have taught him a little respect. But I wanted more. I wanted to win. He was beginning to tire, so I danced around him. Now he couldn't land anything harder than a C, while I could hit him with anything that I wanted to. A's followed by B's, and then A's again. Now he was reeling, and the rounds were going my way at last. A final flurry, and the champ was down. He couldn't take any more, so they stopped the fight. The TKO was mine, but I was weary. A few months to rest, and I would be ready to fight again. I closed my eyes for a moment and savored the victory. It was good.

I reopened my eyes. Calculus stared me in the face, and then Chemistry was next. My desk was covered with books. Only two more weeks to go.

Concert Marks Start of Summer Programming

By DAVE RAZLER

The Summer Session Activities Board (SSAB) yesterday started its series of summer programs with an informal concert in the Union courtyard, featuring guitarists Martha Blood and John Erario.

Throughout the afternoon, people drifted in and out of the courtyard enjoying the music and free sangria and watermelon provided by SSAB.

SSAB member Betty Pohanka, who was busy handing out cups of wine, said that the concert drew more people than the committee thought it would. The original supply of wine ran out before the concert was over.

$10 Fee

The SSAB was created by the undergraduate student government last March to provide entertainment and activities for the summer session students. The Polity Senate also established a $10.00 per student Mandatory Activity Fee to pay for the summer programs.

The Senate also adopted the "Summer Governance Act," which empowered the Council to use money from the Polity Administrative Budget, and to hire and fire employees and take other actions necessary to keep Polity running.

Board Chosen

The Senate then chose Union Governing Board (UGB) member Cindy Ramert to head the committee made up of Polity President Gerry Manginelli, Polity Vice President Paul Trautman, Polity Treasurer Ronald McDonald, SASU Representative Betty Pohanka, UGB member Jane Leung, and Susan Hilderbrand.

SSAB has already scheduled programs for the first summer semester. They will include two movies shown in the Union Auditorium each week, Informal Concerts, bike trips and hikes.

Ramert said that she had received several complaints that the $10.00 fee was too high. However, if an individual attended the programs, he or she would receive more than $10.00 worth of services, she said.

Senate Votes Stipends

The Senate voted to stipend Manginelli, McDonald and Ramert for their summer work. Manginelli and Ramert were voted stipends of $88.00 per week for forty hours of work, and McDonald was voted $50.00 per week for twenty hours.

Ramert said that SSAB's financial status was "unstable at the moment" because it is currently operating on $2,300 left over from last year's summer fees. She said that within two weeks the committee would have final figures on the number of students who had registered for summer courses, and a final budget would be prepared.

Ramert said that she hopes to plan for more programs during the second semester. She said that her tentative plans included trips to the Schaefer Music Festival and other events for the summer students.

Needs Help

The second Summer Session Program will also include another series of films to be shown in the Union Auditorium and the Rainy Night Coffeehouse.

Ramert said that the committee was still in need of suggestions and help in establishing the second semester programs.

Martha Blood and John Erario perform at the summer's first Informal Concert in the Union Courtyard yesterday.
