Consultant Report In

University Moving To Solve HSC Air Handling Problems

A multi-pronged effort to help solve air circulation problems in the 21-story Health Sciences Center clinical sciences tower on the east campus got under way last week on the heels of a consultant's report that confirms preliminary findings of a correlation between loading dock area operations and air contamination.

Among the steps that will be taken is relocation of Central Receiving, from the HSC Loading Dock to a new building on the main campus, by May 6. A bus repair depot, which like Central Receiving, was also located under the building, will be moved to a warehouse area on the main campus by mid-May.

The School of Social Welfare, on the second floor of the building, was moved to the south campus earlier this year after a string of complaints of dizziness, headaches, light-headedness and eye and upper respiratory irritations, symptoms commonly associated with "sick building syndrome."

The State Construction Fund, which oversaw construction of the building, has a $20 million suit pending against the architect, Bertran Goldberg Associates of Chicago, for, among other things, design malfunctions. No trial date has been set. The tower is one of three buildings in the 2.1 million square foot center which was completed in 1977 at a cost of $277 million.

The building's air handling system has been a problem for a decade, the intake and exhaust fans causing severe vibration and noise when turned up to full operational levels. Because the system cannot function as designed, there is "negative pressurization" that allows contaminants from the loading dock area to be drawn into the air handling system. The situation is exacerbated in the winter by a "stack effect" and a prevailing north wind.

The consultant, Clayton Environmental Consultants of Edison, New Jersey, said that while none of the contaminants posed a long-term health problem, there were concentrations of carbon monoxide and nitrogen dioxide — products of engine combustion — that exceeded an acceptable level. The firm also cited pigeon droppings as a potential source of air contamination and suggested that some air handling intakes be relocated.

Clayton also urged that the power plant at the Health Sciences Center use something other than a high temperature hot water corrosion inhibitor that contains morpholine because the additive is a strong irritant. The university has taken steps to switch products and is also exploring installation of a separate humidification system in the Health Sciences Center which would not incorporate steam produced by the building's boilers.

"I am relieved that the report did not uncover new problems," said President John H. Marburger. "The specifics of the Clayton report are helping us focus on the situation."

Representatives of the university were to meet with officials of the State Construction Fund in Albany late last week to discuss a timetable and financing repairs to the air handling system.

In the meantime, work has begun on a $50,000 air conditioning system for the School of Social Welfare. The university also will change maintenance procedures as they relate to the clean-up of pigeon fecal matter and will install nets, to prevent the birds from nesting near the air intake vents or elsewhere on the building.

Missing ceiling tiles will be replaced to prevent air leaks and an accumulation of years of exhaust grime and dust in duct space between the loading area and the second floor will be cleaned. Dumpsters on the loading dock area will also be moved where possible. Once the changes have been made, the area will be retested before the School of Social Welfare returns to its previous quarters.

Details of the report were shared Wednesday with representatives of the faculty, staff, student body and others associated with the School of Social Welfare and the Health Sciences Center.

Campus Offered Package On Festival

By Sue Risoli

The curtain is about to go up on the third annual summer International Theatre Festival at Stony Brook's Fine Arts Center, with a special ticket offer for the university's faculty, staff and alumni.

Those who buy a subscription to all four plays presented this year will save 40 percent off the single-ticket price (and 25 percent off the subscription price for non-university theatre-goers), and see Russia's Leningrad Clowns troupe for free. "We want to offer a deal that's impossible not to take," says Fine Arts Center production manager Alan Inkles. "We want to make it possible for people to experience the whole spectrum of the Festival, not just one or two shows."

The program was assembled after Inkles and Fine Arts Center executive director John Patches trekked through Europe in three weeks, seeing productions and meeting with theatre companies. Though it sounds like a dream vacation, it's a trip Inkles calls "a travel agent's nightmare."

"We didn't even have time to buy souvenirs," he recalls. "I couldn't tell you what Paris looks like. We barely saw the Eiffel Tower."

Here's the end result of the excursion:

- June 7-11, "Need to Know". A drama about the power of the media, based on Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra."

- June 21-25, "Tattoo". Billed as a "silent moving picture of love", "Tattoo" explores without spoken dialogue the mysteries of human relationships (Inkles says, "It isn't mime or dance; the actors leave the stage and move about through the Fine Arts Center.")

- July 5-9, "Sophiatown". A musical re-creation of the '40s and '50s in a freewheeling ghetto community on the outskirts of Johannesburg. American jazz blends with African a capella and Latin rhythms.

- July 12-16, "Kiss of the Spider Woman". Explores the capacity of the human imagination to conjure up beauty and surmount brutality. Based on the movie of the same name, "but more uplifting," says Inkles. The American premiere of a show that's Broadway-bound.

Your Invitation!

Don't forget to join the celebration May 1 marking the university's 30th birthday.

Activities begin at 11:30 a.m. and will wind up at 4 p.m. when President John Marburger cuts Long Island's largest birthday cake! In between there will be plenty to do. See last week's Currents for a complete schedule or call 2-6330.

Clean Up Friday, Sign Up Now!

It's not too late to join the 100 volunteers who've signed up to clean up.

Plans are being finalized for the April 29 campus clean-up. The refreshments have been ordered, the "I cleaned up at Stony Brook" buttons have arrived, and assignments have been drawn up. The next step for coordinator Ann Forkin will be to confirm the participation of each volunteer.

Forkin notes that, so far, volunteers are mostly women, and invites the male contingent "to come on out and join us. We'd also like to see more faculty than have already signed up, to get a broader representation of the campus community."

There will be a reception for volunteers from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the first-floor lobby of the Administration Building, where everyone will get a piece of a sheet cake that will bear the inscription, "We cleaned up at Stony Brook."

To volunteer, call Forkin at 2-6302.

Power, Communication To Be Focus Of April 30 Conclave

A one-day conference designed to explore the roles of power and communication in relationships will be held here April 30.

The conference, "Can We Talk?" will discuss topics such as alcohol and drugs, acquaintance rape, assertiveness training and sexual communication. It will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. in the Stony Brook Union.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Sonia Johnson, Ph.D., feminist and author of two books, From Housewife to Heretic and Going Out of Our Minds: the Metaphysics of Liberation. She will speak on "Going Out of Our Minds: The Role of Women in Transforming the Planet."

A welcome address will be given by Susan Riseling, chairperson of the university's Campus Women's Safety Committee, which has planned and coordinated the event. President John H. Marburger will present four awards for outstanding commitment to equal rights and safety for women. They will go to Gerald J. Lenox, maintenance supervisor; John DiMartino, a student and coordinator of the Public Safety Student Auxiliary; Patricia Crowley, head nurse at the Infirmary and treasurer of the Women's Safety Committee; and Esther Laftique, sophomore representative to the Student Association of the State University of New York, chairman of the Student Coalition on Safety and member of the Campus Women's Safety Committee.

Workshops by on-campus and off-campus professionals will be held in the afternoon.

Session one includes "Captives:

Alcohol, Drugs and Relationships," "Acquaintance Rape: It's a Crime," "Assertiveness Training: Stay Calm, Be Clear, Make a Choice" and "Sexual Communication: How to Get Him/Her to Say Yes and What to do if They Say No."

Session two includes "Miscommunication, Naivete and Sexual Coercion on a College Campus," "Asserting Yourself" and "Male Roles, Changing Ourselves, Changing the Rules." The third session includes, "An Introspective Approach to Relationships," "Child Sexual Abuse...A Prevention Workshop for Parents," "There's No Maybe About It - Say No to Discrimination" and "Women Speak. Men Listen. Do They Communicate?"

Suggested donation is $8 pre-registration and $10 at the door; students, $1 pre-registration, $3 at the door.

Nine Win President's Awards For Excellence

Four faculty members, three professional employees and two librarians have been awarded President's Awards for Excellence.

For Teaching, they are David Bynum of the Department of Microbiology; Max Dresden of the Institute for Theoretical Physics; Patrick Grim of the Department of Philosophy; and Alan Ross of the Department of Psychology.

For Professional Service, they are Betty F. Bechtel, assistant registrar; Carl Burgos, assistant director of General Institutional Services; and Alan Inkles, production manager of the Fine Arts Center.

For Librarianship, they are Jacob Lipkind, reference librarian, and Doris Williams, biology librarian.

The President's Award for Excellence in Teaching began in 1983-84. The award is intended to recognize superior teaching in the undergraduate colleges, in the School of Continuing Education or in the graduate and professional schools.

Bynum, director of the microbiology laboratories and assistant professor of microbiology, has been teaching at Stony Brook since 1982. He received a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri, and a doctorate degree in cell biology from Dartmouth College.

Dresden, executive director of the Institute for Theoretical Physics, has been teaching at Stony Brook since 1964. He has participated in numerous international conferences, about two a year for 20 years, and has written more than 100 papers. He received a master's degree from the University of Leiden in the Netherlands and a doctorate from the University of Michigan. Last year, he received the Outstanding Teacher award, nominated by graduating physics seniors.

Grim, associate professor of philosophy, has been teaching at Stony Brook since 1976. He received bachelor's degrees in philosophy and anthropology from the University of California at Santa Cruz and master's and doctorate degrees from Boston University.

Ross, director of undergraduate studies in the Psychology Department, has been teaching at Stony Brook since 1967. He received a bachelor's degree from City College of New York and master's and doctorate degrees from Yale University. He received an award for the "Most Outstanding Faculty Member," voted by the graduating psychology class, in 1973, and a Professor-of-the-Year Award in 1978.

The President's Award for Excellence in Professional Service began in 1981-82 to provide an opportunity to recognize outstanding performance by campus professional employees. Betty Bechtel, Carl Burgos and Alan Inkles received the awards.

Bechtel, who has been working at Stony Brook since 1964, has served as assistant registrar for scheduling since 1979. Her duties include collecting and verifying data on university course offerings and publication of the schedule of classes for each registration session and assigning classroom and lecture hall space for academic and non-instructional use.

Burgos has been assistant director (for printing and related services) at General Institutional Services since 1985, responsible for directing the activities of the graphics department and supervising a staff of 19 engaged in a variety of graphic arts and related activities.

Alan Inkles has been production manager of the Fine Arts Center since 1984, responsible for programming and coordinating more than 500 annual events. From 1982 to 1984, he worked as the house manager of the Fine Arts Center, scheduling events and rehearsals. Inkles received a bachelor's degree from Stony Brook and is completing a master's degree here.

The President's Award for Excellence in Librarianship began in 1983-84 to give recognition for professional achievement. The award was won by Jacob Lipkind and Doris Williams.

Lipkind, assistant head of the reference department of the library since 1969, has been working at the library since 1965 when he began as a cataloger. He is responsible for developing, organizing and maintaining the general reference collection of 27,000 volumes and 700 serial subscriptions. He manages a budget of $140,000.

Lipkind received a bachelor's degree from Columbia College and a master's degree from Columbia University School of Library Science.

Williams, assistant and associate librarian since 1974, has been working at Stony Brook since 1971. She received a bachelor's degree in zoology from the University of California at Berkeley, a master's degree in library science from Columbia University, a master's degree in biological sciences from Stony Brook and a certificate from the Middle Management Institute based in Washington, D.C.

Winners of the award receive $500 and a certificate. A private reception for the winners will be held at the home of President John H. Marburger.

Offer Theatre Fest Package

• June 28-July 2, The Leningrad Clowns. Comedy, tragedy, sadness and joy, presented by Russia's famed clown troupe.

The subscriptions are $31 for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, and $36 for Friday and Saturday evenings. All performances start at 8 p.m. (except for a July 2 matinee of the Leningrad Clowns) on the Fine Arts Center's Main Stage. The deadline for the faculty, staff and alumni discount is May 13. No telephone orders will be accepted; orders must be accompanied by a flyer coupon that has been distributed on campus. Individual tickets for each performance (for the public and for the campus community) will be $13 for Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, $15 for Fridays and Saturdays.

After each performance, there will be a free open bar, and audiences will be able to meet with and talk to the actors, says Fine Arts Center marketing manager Kathy Nofi.

In addition to the subscription plays, the Festival will present summer theatre for children. The productions will be: "Bounce and Oo La La's Vaudeville Circus" (July 11), "The Magic of Danny Orleans" (July 18), and "Rapunzel" (July 21). All tickets are $4 ($3 for groups of 20 or more.) Performances begin at 10 a.m.

"This year there's such diversity in the Festival," marvels Inkles. "There are elements of the avant-garde, but they're presented in a very down-to-earth way. There's really something for everyone."

For more information, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 2-7230.

"Affirmative Action" Meeting Here

The third annual "town hall" open meeting on affirmative action will be held May 5, Noon to 2 p.m., in the Stony Brook Union Auditorium.

Faculty and staff are invited to discuss affirmative action issues with President John H. Marburger and university administrators. Topics to be covered include: transfer/promotion practices, sexism, sexual harassment, tenure, equal education opportunities, and training and apprenticeship programs.

The meeting will be sponsored by the Office of the President and the President's Advisory Committee on Affirmative Action.

April 26 Reception To Honor Visiting Profs

A reception in honor of five visiting professors from local SUNY colleges will be held April 26 in the Frank Melville Jr. Memorial Library. The event will be held at 4 p.m. in the Jacob K. Javits Conference Room, second floor.

The honorees include Onita Estes-Hicks, Konrad Wu and Rajan Anantharaman of the State University College at Old Westbury; George Cosgrove of Suffolk Community College; and Judith Pacifico of State University College at Farmingdale.

The professors are studying with

Stony Brook faculty as part of the Graduate Research Initiative, a state-funded program to raise the level of support of graduate studies and research at SUNY.

Wu, associate professor of chemistry at Old Westbury, is studying fragments of molecules induced by synchrotron radiation and is working with David Hanson, chemistry professor at Stony Brook. He is doing experiments at the National Synchrotron Light Source at Brookhaven National Laboratory.

"(The program) allows him to spend 100 percent of his time to do state-of-the-art research and work with graduate students," Hanson said.

Anantharaman, associate professor of math at Old Westbury, is working with Ron Douglas, dean of Physical Sciences and Math, on a joint project in mathematical research involving a meeting a calculus and matrix theory.

Cosgrove, professor of engineering science at Suffolk County Community College, is doing a theoretical analysis on diffusion-induced grain boundary migration in metals. Cosgrove is working with Alex King, associate vice provost for Graduate Studies.

Pacifico, associate professor in the Biological Sciences Department at Farmingdale, is working on an enzyme found in sensory neurons in chicks. She is working with Sheryl Scott, associate professor of neurobiology.

Onita Estes-Hicks, associate professor in the humanities at Old Westbury, is working on an oral history project concerning black workers and the New Orleans Mardi Gras. She is working with history professor Wilbur Miller.

Multi-Media Poetry Fair Set For April 30

A multi-media poetry fair will be held here April 30 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The fair, sponsored by Poetry Brook, a non-profit group of students and faculty dedicated to the development of a wider poetry audience at Stony Brook, will include video shows, music and readings by undergraduates, graduates and community residents. The event is expected to run from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Poetry Center in the Humanities Building, and from 12:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Peace, Disarmament and Arms Control Center in the Old Chemistry Building.

Video shows will be presented by Louise Millman, a graduate student and art teacher at East Northport High School, and performance art by Jim Lahey, an undergraduate art student.

Readings will be given by Rosa Caparros, graduate student in Spanish; Amelia Salinero, graduate student in Spanish and a librarian at Stony Brook; Eduardo Rada-Bernasconi, graduate English student and poet and painter; Mindy Kronenberg, a Miller Place poet; Margaret Roth, undergraduate English student; and Annemarie Kemeny, graduate English student.

Music will be performed by Sue Doherty, an undergraduate, who will play the synthesizer; George Bidermann, a graduate student, who will play the guitar; Rada-Bernasconi, who will play piano; Sandra Rogers and Susan Royal, graduate students in music who will perform a poetry recital; Bill Capozzi, an undergraduate, and his band; Amit Sen, Stony Brook alumnus and bookseller at the Corner Book Shop in Setauket, who will play guitar; and poetry and jazz with Ray Kruz and Mitch Nelson, post-graduate students at Brookhaven National Laboratory, and Marie Puma, an actress.

The fair will coincide with the publication of Brook Spring 88, the second annual book of poetry by students, faculty and community residents. Among the contributors are Professors Amiri Baraka, Richard Elman, Luigi Fontanella, June Jordan, Marvin Levine, Antonia de Nicolas and Nicholas Rzhevsky. Other contributors include Carol Marburger and local poets, August Franza of Setauket, Mindy Kronenberg of Miller Place, Marcia Slatkin of Stony Brook, Michael Walsh of Rocky Point and Claire White of St. James.
