STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT STONY BROOK

January 25, 1988

Forecast Snow? Tune In For Details

Like other Long Island residents, Stony Brook faculty, staff and students confronted with inclement winter weather on a weekday morning begin a guessing game of "should I or shouldn't I?" Before rounding up the dog sled team, personnel should consult the following guide for determining whether the university is open for business. Only President John H. Marburger can make the decision to delay or cancel classes because of snow or ice conditions. He does so after conferring with campus safety and physical plant officials. Key factors in the decision are the conditions of area and campus roadways, condition of campus parking lots and railroad service. The decision is made early in the morning, before faculty, staff and students leave their homes for the university.

Radio Announcements

The Office of University News Services notifies radio stations when campus operations are suspended. There's a difference between "closing the campus" and "cancelling classes". Employees are expected to report to work even when classes are cancelled (although the announcement may be read along with other "closings".) Failure to appear requires charging the day off to accrued leave credits.

On Long Island, stations WALK, WBLI, WGLI, WGSM, WHLI, WLIR, WRCN, WRHD, WRIV and WUSB broadcast cancellation announcements. New York City stations WABC, WINS, WMCA, WNBC and WOR do so as well. (See box for radio station call numbers.)

Office Snow Chains

Employees not on campus during a snowstorm will be contacted, if necessary, by the telephone snow chain established in each vice presidential/vice provostial area. Everyone should keep a copy of the chain, with telephone numbers, at home for use in these instances.

Employee Absences

Accruals must be charged by employees who don't come to work when the campus is open (even if classes are cancelled.)

The CSEA, UUP and PEF contracts specify that employees in those units who have come to work and are directed to leave work—due to potentially unhealthy and unsafe working conditions (hazardous driving or unheated offices)—may do so without charging accrued leave. Employees who feel that conditions within a department are unhealthy or unsafe should contact (in this order) their supervisor, the Office of Human Resources, or the appropriate Vice President. Human Resources will contact the Office of Environmental Health and Safety, and a decision will be made quickly. Employees should not be directed to leave work unless the "chain of command" has been adhered to.

Anyone who wants to leave work early because of "uncomfortable" (as opposed to unsafe or unhealthy) conditions, without being directed to do so, must charge accruals. Supervisory approval is needed to authorize a charge to accruals.

If county or regional offices declare snow emergencies and motorists are urged to refrain from traveling, the university will usually petition state officials to permit absences without leave accruals. If the request is approved, any accruals charged will be returned to employees.

Campus Maintenance

Campus crews are out with a dozen snow removal trucks as early as midnight, sanding, salting and plowing the 10 miles of campus roadway and 43 campus parking lots. Physical plant workers never allow snow to accumulate more than two inches. Cars may be left in a lot overnight during

Special Convocation February 3

Stony Brook's fourth university convocation, sponsored by the Office of the Provost, will be held on February 3 from 12:15 to 1:30 p.m. in the Recital Hall at the Fine Arts Center. Provost Jerry Schubel will deliver the keynote address, "Stony Brook: Obstacles and Opportunities." All faculty, staff, and students are invited.

Distinguished Lecture Series

Apartheid Foe To Speak Here January 26

Donald Woods, subject of the film "Cry Freedom" and outspoken critic of apartheid, will speak on "Apartheid and the Tragedy of South Africa" January 26 at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

The talk, which is free and open to the public, is the second in the spring 1988 University Distinguished Lecture Series, co-sponsored by Newsday and Stony Brook's Office of the Provost. It will be held at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Recital Hall.

Woods is a fifth-generation white South African, descended from British and Irish pioneers who settled in South Africa in 1820. He studied law at the University of Cape Town and at 31, became editor-in-chief of the 114-year-old South African newspaper, the Daily Dispatch, in 1965.

His editorial attacks on the racial policy of apartheid drew increasing fire from the South African government and many white newspaper readers. During his 12 years as editor-in-chief, he was prosecuted in court seven times by the state under South Africa's publication laws restricting criticism of governmental policy.

In 1977, he was arrested and punished without legal process for publishing details of the killing of his friend, the young black leader Steve Biko. He was subjected to banning orders for five years, from being forbidden to write or speak publicly to being in a room with more than one other person.

Three months after his arrest, following attacks on his family, including his 5-year-old daughter, by the State Security Police, he escaped with his wife and five children across the border into the black-ruled country of Lesotho. The family reached London, where they now live and where Woods works as a writer, broadcaster and lecturer on apartheid.

Since reaching London in 1978, he has been appointed director of the Lincoln Trust, a foundation that supplies information about apartheid to the international media. In 1985, he was appointed special adviser to the 49-nation Commonwealth Secretariat in London.

The author of three books on South Africa, Biko, a biography translated into 12 languages, Asking for Trouble, an award-winning autobiography, and Black and White, about the South African dilemma, he travels extensively throughout the world, briefing governments and addressing audiences on apartheid.

The University Distinguished Lecture Series began in March 1982. Additional speakers this spring will be Lerone Bennett, executive editor of Ebony magazine, I.F. Stone, founder and editor of I.F. Stone's Weekly, Frances Moore Lappe, author of Diet for a Small Planet, Ramsey Clark, former attorney general of the United States, and Bishop Desmond Tutu, Anglican bishop of South Africa.

Past speakers included Czeslaw Milosz, the 1980 Nobel Prize winner in literature, Carlos Fuentes, distinguished novelist and former Mexican ambassador to France, and most recently Robert Reno, economics editor of Newsday who opened the series on January 20.

StonyBrook

Foundation Elects Officers, Reports Gain

Stony Brook Foundation, the fund-raising arm of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, has elected directors and officers of the board.

Re-elected directors for a three-year term were John Hart Jr. of Babylon, a partner in the Patchogue law firm of Pelletreau and Pelletreau; John Scaduto of Long Beach, treasurer of Nassau County; and community leader Joyce Turner of Patchogue. Elected as a director was Richard Gelfond of Manhattan, chairman of the board of Gel-Ren Inc. of Great Neck. Gelfond is a 1976 graduate of the Stony Brook.

Elected chairman of the board was Dr. James H. Simons, of Manhattan and Old Field, chairman of the board of Renaissance Technologies, Manhattan. Also elected officers were Hart, as vice chairman; John Corrigan, of Coram, president and regional director of Metro Region-New York City, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Rochester, as treasurer, and Turner, as secretary.

In other business, Foundation officials announced that Foundation assets have tripled over the last three years to more than $9 million. Simons attributed the growth to a combination of efforts.

"The substantial rise in the assets of the Stony Brook Foundation over the past several years is a development in which the university can take pride," he said. "This growth is not due to some single, magical source, or other non-recurring event. It is due, first of all, to the hard work of an outstanding staff; secondly, to an increasingly involved and dedicated board, and thirdly, to a growing realization in the community and the state, that Stony Brook is a uniquely valuable institution. These same reasons should continue to propel the Foundation's growth in the years to come."

Stony Brook Foundation is a non-profit corporation established in 1965 to further the development of the university by soliciting, receiving and managing on its behalf, gifts, cash, securities, real and personal property and bequests.

WEST GERMANY SALUTES PROFESSOR: Dr. Barbara Elling, of Huntington Station, professor of German at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, received the Cross of the Order of Merit from Acting Consul General of Germany Dr. Thomas Fischer-Dieskau at a December 16 ceremony at the Consulate General of the Federal Republic of Germany in Manhattan.

Transition

Public Safety Gets New Assistant Director

Susan Riseling of Setauket has been appointed assistant director for public safety at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, the first woman to hold the post.

Prior to joining Stony Brook, Riseling, 27, a native of Silver Spring, Md., worked at the University of Maryland for five years, where she was responsible for fire safety and security at campus dormitories. She received a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from the University of Maryland, College Park, and is working on a master's in criminal justice.

She is a member of several university committees, including the President's Advisory Task Force on Women's Safety and the Mental Health Advisory Committee. She also chairs the Women's Safety Committee.

Gary Barnes, director of public safety, said Riseling's experience is an asset to the department.

"Riseling fills a void in the Department of Public Safety. She brings to Stony Brook experience in women's safety issues and crime prevention, both of which are of great concern to the campus."

Susan Riseling

News Bureau Appointments Announced

Three appointments have been made to Stony Brook's News Bureau. Vicky Penner Katz has been appointed director of University News Services, Sue Risoli, assistant director, and Wendy Greenfield, senior writer.

Before coming to the university, Katz had served since 1974 as managing editor of the North Shore News Group, where she oversaw daily operations of The Southampton News, The Northport Observer, Commack News, Mid Island News and Islip News. A veteran journalist, Katz received a bachelor's degree (journalism) in 1962 from Hofstra College. Since 1975 she has been a member of the Press Club of Long Island, the local chapter of Sigma Delta Chi (SDX), the Society of Professional Journalists; she served as president of the Press Club in 1981-82 and is currently its treasurer. A business and financial writer for a Long Island daily for 10 years, Katz has also been associated with the Melville public relations firm of Greenstone and Rabasca, and has served as public relations consultant to the Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council. She has served as a national judge in Sigma Delta Chi's annual journalism competition and has won several prizes for political reporting and business writing from SDX and the New York State Press Association.

"Vicky's experience as a member of the Long Island journalism community, as well as her longstanding reputation for excellence and integrity, make her a welcome addition to our communications team," said Patricia J. Teed, vice president for university affairs.

The News Services office acts as a liaison between journalists and on-campus constituencies by responding to media inquiries and writing press releases. Its staff also writes for a number of SUNY-wide publications, as well as for Stony Brook's own faculty/staff and alumni publications.

Sue Risoli has been named assistant director of the News Services Office. She came to the News office in 1982 as a junior writer, after working as public information officer at the university's Marine Sciences Research Center. From 1984-86 she was the founding editor of Campus Currents. She is a Stony Brook alumna, having received a bachelor's degree in English from the university in 1979. Risoli is a member of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, a national organization of college and university news, alumni, publications and fundraising professionals.

Wendy Greenfield has joined the News office as senior writer. Previously, she worked for four years at the Staten Island Advance as a medical reporter. She is a member of the National Association of Science Writers and a member of Sigma Delta Chi. Greenfield received a bachelor's degree in French from the State University of New York at Albany in 1982.

snow conditions, if the car is registered with the Traffic Office and has legal access to that lot.

Reduced bus schedules may be in effect during hazardous road conditions.

University Hospital

The Hospital is open and staffed 24 hours a day, regardless of weather. However, the Administrator on Duty (AOD) may call a snow alert when predicted or actual snow conditions affect hospital operations. This alert is essentially a planning/assessing period, in case the "alert" becomes an "emergency."

When a snow emergency is called because conditions have or will soon impede area transportation, on-duty staff will be retained and advance shift schedules followed. The hospital's and campus's four-wheel vehicles may be sent to pick up physicians, nurses and other key hospital employees.

Hospital personnel should call the hospital switchboard at 689-8333 for updated information and assistance with transportation to and from the hospital.

Snow near the hospital will be removed in this order: Emergency Department access road, walkway and ambulance/visitor parking; loop road/access roads/hospital circle; hospital entrance sidewalks, Level 5 roof/fire exits from towers. The Physical Plant will coordinate closing surface parking lots to allow for snow removal.

Essential University Services

Employees in key university areas (such as the hospital, Public Safety, Power Plant and Computing Center) should receive guidance from their supervisors when uncomfortable or difficult working and weather conditions exist.

For More Information

For more information on inclement weather policy, call Alan Entine, manager of employee and labor relations, in the main campus Office of Human Resources, at 632-6140. For Hospital/Health Sciences Center information, call Jesse Drucker, manager of employee and labor relations at the HSC Office of Human Resources, 444-2596.
