...And the Winner Is: A Stony Brook Librarian

Barring a tie in the ballot contest Saturday (May 2), it's safe to say that the new secretary of the United University Professions today is a Stony Brook librarian. That's because the only two candidates are Stony Brook librarians. Jeanne Galbraith, who heads the circulation department in the Health Sciences Center library, was the candidate from UUP's majority party, the United Caucus, which she heads, and Janet Steins, who heads the Chemistry library and is anthropology bibliographer, was the Reform Caucus candidate. Another first is certain: the winner will be the first member of the New York State Librarians Association to hold office in the state union. Galbraith and Steins represent the two Stony Brook UUP chapters, HSC and Main Campus, and are professional colleagues and friendly acquaintances.

Bail-or-Jail: Fun Day Raises Funds for MDA

The campus raised hundreds of dollars in a student-sponsored fund campaign for the Muscular Dystrophy Association on April 24. Most of the money was pledged to "make bail" for campus administrators who good-naturedly went to "jail" after being "arrested." The administrators called on friends and acquaintances to pledge funds as a way of serving their "sentences." Thirty dollars came from a startled Wisconsin court judge, William Chase. His brother, Paul, acting associate vice president for student affairs, reached the judge by phone in his chambers. Paul soberly reported, "I've been arrested and I need money to make bail." Lawyer Chase responded: "I'll get there to help." No need for that, Paul told his brother, chuckling. "Just send money for the MDA."

In all, the sponsoring Residence Hall Association raised nearly $3,000 from three events. The 15 participating administrators accounted for $2,200, led by Carole Freidman of the Office of Student Activities with $455. Chase, with a little help from Ashland, Wis., was second with $303.

Black Friday

The entire campus was without its main source of electric power briefly on Friday, April 24. A control circuit failure just before noon caused the outage. Robert Francis, vice president for campus operations, said that once the failure was located in a substation, power was restored manually over the next 30 minutes. Meantime, University Hospital functioned with emergency power sources.

Four Chosen for Honorary Degrees

Honorary doctorates will be conferred at Stony Brook's commencement program May 24 on four internationally recognized scholars in psychology, literary criticism, semiotics, and computer science. The SUNY Board of Trustees has awarded the honorary degrees and they will be conferred at commencement by trustee Nan Johnson. The recipients are:

- Albert Bandura, David Starr Jordan professor of social sciences in psychology at Stanford University, an honorary doctor of science degree. Bandura's nomination cited him as "the primary theorist in psychology contributing to the synthesis of various learning principles into social learning theory."

- Wayne Clayton Booth, Pullman professor and chair of Communication Ideas and Methods at the University of Chicago, an honorary doctor of letters degree. Booth, a participant in Stony Brook's first federally funded Summer Institute for Secondary Teachers of English, in 1965, is a prominent scholar and literary critic, relating literature to philosophy, ethics to politics, social sciences to humanities. His book, Rhetoric of Fiction, is considered "largely responsible for the recent re-evaluation of the novelist's art."

- Umberto Eco, professor of semiotics at the University of Bologna in Italy, major contemporary philosopher, and author of The Name of the Rose, a worldwide best selling work of fiction, an honorary doctor of letters degree. Eco participated in Stony Brook's 1985-86 Distinguished University Lecture Series.

- Donald Ervin Knuth, professor of computer science at Stanford University, an honorary doctor of science degree. A pioneer in shaping the early development of electronic data processing, Knuth has been credited more recently with being "responsible for a revolution in computer typesetting."

These four are among 46 distinguished Americans and world citizens designated by SUNY trustees for honorary degrees. The first two to be conferred, April 21 in Albany, went to Ralph P. Davidson, the 1986 commencement speaker at Stony Brook, and Harold L. Enarson. They co-chaired the Commission on the Future of the State University of New York, which is being recognized as one of the most important documents in SUNY's history of almost 40 years. Recipients at other SUNY campuses include civil rights advocate Alvin F. Poussaint of Harvard, American Federation of Teachers President Albert Shanker, novelists John Oliver Killens and Joyce Carol Oates, and cartoonist/social critic Garry Trudeau.

The Stony Brook recipients were nominated on campus for consideration by the Faculty Committee on Honorary Degrees. Chaired by Daniel O'Leary of Psychology, members included Thomas Altizer, Religious Studies; Lorne M. Mendell, Neurobiology and Behavior; Robert Olsen, Medicine and Pharmacology; Michal Simon, Earth and Space Sciences; and John Truxal, Technology and Society. The four degrees being conferred in May will bring to 21 the number of honorary doctorates awarded at Stony Brook since SUNY instituted the practice in 1981.

Stage XII Named for Eleanor Roosevelt

By ALVIN F. OICKLE

The Stage XII residential quadrangle complex, one of the few remaining unnamed facilities at Stony Brook, is getting a name at last. And the name is that of a New Yorker whom some consider the most important woman of the 20th century—Anna Eleanor Roosevelt.

She married Franklin Delano Roosevelt, her fifth cousin once removed, and went on to become one of the world's best known and most effective civil rights activists and humanitarians.

Her name, one of nine suggested to a campus ad hoc committee, was supported by the Stony Brook Council, and authorized by the State University Board of Trustees.

Leslie H. Johnson, acting coordinator of student development for the Office of Residence Life, said a major dedication program will be planned for the fall semester. Johnson was quad director, chaired the naming committee, and suggested Eleanor Roosevelt's name.

Frederick R. Preston, vice president for student affairs, initiated the naming process for Stage XII and Stage XVI more than three years ago. Stage XVI, located near the Health Sciences Center, was named the Harry Chapin Apartment Complex, in honor of the late Long Island composer, performer, and human rights activist. In recommending Roosevelt, Preston said, the committee noted "the relationship of her United Nations work to the current development of an international studies minor in Keller Residential College" at that quad.

Dallas Bauman, director of residence life, said: "Her efforts with regard to women's issues, her concern for the welfare of members of minority groups, and most especially her work in the United Nations and with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights make her an appropriate symbol of the quality of community life in the quad. Stage XII's history as the home of a very diverse resident population speaks to the appropriateness of this recommendation."

Eleanor Roosevelt was often called First Lady of the World, but New York was her home. She was born in New York City on Oct. 11, 1884, daughter of

Elliott and Anna Hall Roosevelt. She was Theodore Roosevelt's niece, and often visited him and "Aunt Edith" at their Sagamore Hill estate in Oyster Bay. She grew up in Manhattan and she spent summers at the family estates, at first in Hempstead and later in Tivoli. When she and Franklin Roosevelt were married on

SUCOLIAN, May 13, 1959

Well, here we are. Eight months have gone by so quickly that they seemed to just disappear. Now, with spring in the air, we tend to forget all the high points of the past year. We've weathered the snow and mud, the tests and the homework, the battle of the constitution, the lack of heat in the buildings, and finally the printing of ten issues. Now is the time to look to the future. Next year will bring with it many opportunities for all of us on campus. Student Government will be functioning and will have to stand the test with our support. Next year is our chance to really show what we can do. We have a fine school and all the advantages we need. Let's use them to make an even better campus life for the future. It's all in your hands.

Statesman, May 3, 1967

The tripling (of resident students in dorms) situation, the source of much past dispute, is the object of a petition now being circulated about the campus. The students responsible for the petition have submitted a summation of these complaints to Governor Rockefeller in order to apply direct pressure to the sources of Stony Brook's growth.

MOYERS ADDRESSES STUDENTS

...Moyers believes the North Vietnamese will give up, pulling out over a long period of time...Another possible end to the war could come from Russia, the largest military supporter of the Viet Cong. Perhaps they fear the explosion of WWII and would stop Hanoi. Possibly a new U.S. leader will be elected with a mandate to settle the war at any cost. Giving his impression of the 1968 Republican presidential convention, Moyers said that Rockefeller would be the best candidate. He said he couldn't consider Nixon because Nixon is a "loser."

It's Pitch-In Time For Campus Cleanup

A campus-wide cleanup project is scheduled Friday and Saturday (May 8-9) and the entire campus community is being encouraged to help out. Friday's efforts are aimed at the general campus; Saturday's at the residential areas.

Operation Metamorphosis is chaired by Provost Jerry R. Schubel and Polity President Mark Gunning, who united after discovering each had come up with the same idea. And the idea is to get thousands of students, faculty, and staff members to "put some pride back into this university," in Gunning's words.

The project will get under way Friday at 1 p.m. from a distribution center being set up in the Fine Arts Center Loop. Participants will pick up trash bags and go throughout campus collecting litter. Paul Chase, acting associate vice president for student affairs and project coordinator, said the wooded areas especially need attention. Each returned bag—filled with garbage—will earn the volunteer a free ticket to a barbecue in the Fine Arts Center Mall for Friday supper. Band music will add to the evening celebration.

On Saturday, quad renovations are scheduled. Tools and supplies, including plants, will be provided by Physical Plant. Prizes will be awarded in several categories, such as planting gardens and painting bollards, which are cement posts installed to prevent vehicular traffic. Prizes are planned in competitions between fraternities and sororities, and in the quads. Residential hall directors have been recruited to help organize volunteers.

"I am hoping," Gunning said, "the campus community will support our efforts to make needed improvements and have fun doing it."

NIH Awards $550,000 To HSC's Malbon Group

A group founded and directed by Craig C. Malbon has been granted an initial award of more than $550,000 for a training program by the National Institutes of Health.

The NIH has approved an institutional national research service award to the Diabetes and Metabolic Diseases Research Group (DMDRG) in Stony Brook's Health Sciences Center. A five-year award was recommended by the National Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases Advisory Council. The award will be activated in late summer when Malbon returns from a sabbatical year in Massachusetts.

The multidisciplinary program focuses on providing opportunities to the scientifically trained (Ph.D.) and clinically trained (M.D.) to acquire expertise in the study of metabolic diseases using state-of-the-art approaches to cell and molecular biology and biochemistry. The initial award covers direct costs for training four postgraduate fellows.

Malbon, professor of pharmacological sciences, founded DMDRG upon arrival at Stony Brook in 1978. William Benjamin, professor of physiology and biophysics, joined him to organize a group capitalizing on Stony Brook's broad-based faculty. Said Malbon: "The program faculty, from nine separate departments, including one from Washington University in St. Louis, are principal investigators of active research groups and are committed to excellence in the training of postgraduate fellows. In addition, Dr. Marvin Kuschner, dean of the School of Medicine, provided enthusiastic support for the program and pledged supplemental funds to make the fellowships for MDs more competitive."

Malbon sees the grant as NIH's delivering a message to the research community: "Even in times of shrinking federal resources we must cultivate the training of young investigators and the opportunities that exist for them in biomedical research at excellent universities like Stony Brook."

University Club Opens

It's being called University Club and it's been launched to meet the often-cited need for a campus place where faculty and staff members can meet for meals and informal gatherings.

That's how Associate Provost Benjamin Walcott explains this spring's efforts at testing out the potential. A March lunch attracted 110, enough to encourage another at noon on Thursday, May 14, at the University Commons in the Chemistry Building.

In the fall, Walcott said, University Club will sponsor three lunches each week, and provide a "more attractive club atmosphere" at the Commons. A caterer will be hired to provide the meals each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. "We're trying to keep the cost reasonable, no more than $5," said Walcott. The food will be offered buffet style, perhaps including beer and wine. And long tables will be set up to encourage "talking with colleagues."

He noted the name "faculty club" was eschewed because "we see it as a broader organization to allow interaction." Policies, including fees, will be drafted to accommodate members and their guests. Funds are needed to buy tables, dishes, and the other supplies the club will require, Walcott said.

And this action, Walcott noted, is preliminary to establishing a permanent University Club in the new conference center scheduled for construction near the main entrance over the next two years. "Then," Walcott said, "we can have a place with lounge chairs and a dining area." And, he added, there will be a structured organization to run it. For now, he and Christine McCormick, assistant to Provost Jerry R. Schubel, are carrying out Schubel's wish to develop plans. "It's very embryonic," Walcott said, "but we've met with concerned faculty and there is definitely a need and a willingness to help."

Eleanor Roosevelt—

March 17, 1905, they lived in Manhattan. Their later lives were spent in Albany and Washington, but their family home remained in Hyde Park, N.Y. The Roosevelt home and her own place on the estate, called Val-kill, have become national landmarks open to the public. She died at Hyde Park on Nov. 7, 1962, and was buried there beside her husband.

Eleanor Roosevelt spoke out as few First Ladies ever have. When FDR occupied the White House, she was especially active on behalf of youth, and later became a leader in gaining recognition for the rights of blacks and women. Historian Winfred D. Wandersee described her as FDR's eyes and ears... "but she was more than that; she was his conscience." She continued her leadership after his death. She was a U.S. delegate to the first United Nations sessions, and her work on the UN Human Rights declaration was "the greatest accomplishment of my life."

Quote: Eleanor Roosevelt

—"The young people are the ones who have the spirit of adventure and imagination which drives us forward. The older generation is the balance wheel that keeps the young from going too far." - 1932

—"The basis of all real education is the contact of youth with a personality which will stimulate not only to work but to thought." - 1933

—"We must learn to work together, all of us, regardless of race, creed, or color. We must wipe out the feeling of intolerance wherever we find it, of belief that any one group can go ahead alone." - 1934

—"Where, after all, do universal rights begin? In small places, close to home—so close, and so small, that they cannot be seen on any maps of the world. Yet they are the world of the individuals persons; the neighborhood he lives in; the school or college he attends; the factory, farm, office where he works. Such are the places where every man, woman, and child seeks equal justice, equal opportunity, equal dignity without discrimination. Unless these rights have meaning there, they have little meaning anywhere. Without concerned citizen action to uphold them close to home, we shall look in vain for progress in the larger world." - UN address, 1958.

Matthews, Pindell Earn Guggenheims

Two Stony Brook faculty members are among 273 scholars, scientists, and artists awarded fellowships by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation.

They are Gary G. Matthews, associate professor of neurobiology and behavior, whose project involves cellular mechanisms controlling secretion; and Howardena D. Pindell, professor of art, who will use her fellowship to pursue her painting.

The Guggenheim selection committee reviewed 3,421 applicants. The 273 awards total $6,336,000 for the 63rd annual competition.

Matthews earned his Ph.D. in psychology at the University of Pennsylvania and joined the Stony Brook faculty in 1979. His earlier honors have included both the Woodrow Wilson and the Ford Foundation Fellowships.

Pindell, a faculty member since 1979, was formerly associate curator of New York's Museum of Modern Art. She has degrees in fine arts from Yale and Boston universities and has exhibited widely. Recent projects have included mixed media works based on her travels through Japan and India.

Gagnon Heads Research Academy

Dr. John H. Gagnon, professor of sociology, has been elected president of the International Academy of Sex Research. The academy is an interdisciplinary scientific organization that is considered one of the most prestigious in the world in the area of research into sexual behavior. The group was founded in 1974 as a forum for leaders in this field and its 160 members come from around the globe.

Gagnon has been associated with

Stony Brook since 1968 and has served in the departments of psychology, psychiatry, and sociology. He has written more than a dozen books and numerous articles on sex research and is a past winner of the National Award for Career Contribution to Sex Research from the Society for the Scientific Study of Sex. He is working on a new social/historical book to be called Gender and Desire. He will be sworn in this July at the group's conference in Tutzing, West Germany.

Summer Theatre Festival June 8 through July 21

Nine productions and 33 performances are scheduled for the second annual International Theatre Festival this summer at the Fine Arts Center.

John I. Patches, festival director, and Alan Inkles, production manager, toured several countries this winter to audition productions for Stony Brook audiences.

The festival opens June 8 with a German dance-theatre company and runs through an American play performed by a Dutch company July 21. Advance tickets are on sale now, for either individual performances or two separate series: Monday-Tuesday and Wednesday-Sunday. Subscription prices are $28 for

National, Regional Awards Highlight Winter Sports

The winter sports season ended in late March but national and regional recognition is still coming in.

The women's basketball team earned two major honors. Declan McMullen was named Coach of the Year in both the NCAA East Region and Metropolitan area, and senior guard Michele White was named to the Kodak Division III All-America team. White, the university's all-time basketball scoring leader with 2,183 career points, was named Player of the Year by the Metropolitan Coaches Basketball Association.

Senior Sue Yarsinske earned All-America honors in the 400-meter dash, finishing third in the national track championships.

Here is a summary of team won-lost records and highlights:

Men's basketball, 21-6; third in NCAA East tournament; senior guard Charlie Bryant, 21.9 points per game, named to the Metropolitan New York-New Jersey All-Star team.

Men's swimming, 9-1 in dual meets, Metropolitan Conference dual champs; five swimmers qualified for national championships.

Women's swimming, 9-3 in dual meets; Maj Britt Hansen won gold medal in 100-yard free-style at Metropolitan Conference championships.

Men's squash, 10-11, ranked 16th in nation; junior Rob Bruno Metropolitan Conference champion third successive year, defeating freshman teammate Jay Warshaw in finals.

Track; the women's team was first and men, second, in the Public Athletic Conference indoor championships.

SQUASH COACH Bob Snyder accepts check for $1,000 from Stuart Goldstein, '73, Stony Brook's first sports All-American. He has gone on to professional play and is regarded as one of the world's best squash players. The gift is to help the squash program for undergraduates.
